PTS Consulting (UK) Ltd announces successful renewal of ISO 9001:2000 certification

PTS Consulting is pleased to announce that it has successfully renewed its official ISO 9001:2000 certification. ISO 9001 is the international standard that defines quality management and is increasingly becoming a requirement for both private and public sector projects. PTS Consulting first achieved certification from the British Standards Institute in 1993. Further to the acquisition of independent consultancy Improcom in 2006, PTS Consulting has been working to align the combined quality procedures and processes of the two organisations in order to undergo an ISO audit.

To achieve this aim, PTS underwent a detailed evaluation process over a number of months. This incorporated a complete documentation review and process development culminating in a comprehensive two-day audit by BSI. The certification to ISO 9001:2000 recognises that the policies, practices and processes of PTS ensure consistent quality of the services provided to its clients. With this certification, PTS Consulting clients can be confident that PTS remains dedicated to its ultimate goals of client satisfaction and commitment to excellence.

Gill Rowbotham, UK Operations Director at PTS Consulting said: "Further to the completion of the 2006 Improcom acquisition, I am delighted that the combined procedures and processes at PTS Consulting have successfully achieved ISO 9001:2000 certification. The ISO certification from the British Standards Institute is a widely recognised global standard for quality management in business-to-business dealings which re-affirms PTS Consulting's reputation for delivering world class independent IT consultancy."
